Haberdashers' Hall, City of London
6th July 2017

Let's Listen London 2017 is a unique event that will offer insight into the vital business and educational importance of achieving good hearing among business professionals and students alike.

It will spotlight the needless loss of talent and expertise that can be prevented by implementing some simple hearing solutions, resulting in enhanced staff retention, motivation, productivity, learning and trust at all levels.

Leading UK hearing loss charity Hearing Link and the Master of The Worshipful Company of Feltmakers are hosting this groundbreaking event to:

- provide insight into the prevalence and impact of hearing loss in the workplace and on campus
- enable businesses and HEIs to design strategies that will identify, support and retain experienced and valued talent whose hearing is impacting their performance
- demonstrate some of the solutions (technological and behavioural) that improve hearing in the workplace.

This event is essential for anyone who manages skilled talent, or teaches students, and is concerned to optimise the productivity of their staff or provide an inclusive learning environment. It will also offer invaluable information and practical demonstrations to individuals who are becoming aware of changes in their own hearing.

UK's leading hearing industry and accessibility specialists, such as BT, Lipreading Practice, Gordon Morris, GN ReSound, UK Hearing Care, Medico Testing Solutions and Conversor, will exhibit and run workshops to explore simple, inexpensive solutions to manage hearing loss at work and on campus, including personal and group hearing solutions.

Hearing awareness training and personal hearing assessments will also be available on the day.
